PART I | THE SHADOW BEFORE | KING

Ellie, known to most of the kids at Derry Janitors' School (and even to the teachers, who would never have used the nickname unless it was Scattering Bill), was at home, taking out the last of a nasty case of influenza. In the autumn of 1957, eight months before the red horses began and twenty-eight years before the final showdown, Scattering Bill was seventeen.

Bill had made the boat beside which George now sat. He had made it sitting up in bed, his back propped against a pile of pillows, while his mother played Für Elise on the piano in the parlor and rain swept noisily against his bedroom window.

Over three-quarters of the way down the block he one headed toward the intersection and the dead traffic light, Witcham Street was flooded in major traffic by mudgepots and by many sinkholes. Stenciled across each of the houses was DERRY DEPT. OF PUBLIC WORKS. Beyond them, the rain had spilled out of gutters clogged with branches and rocks and big sticky piles of autumn leaves. The water had lost its grip on the paving and they marched whole greedy handfuls—all of them—by the third day of the rains. By noon of the fourth day, big chunks of the street's surface were tearing through the intersection of Jackson and Witcham like miniature white-water rapids. By that time, many people in Derry had begun to make nervous jokes about arks. The Public Works Department had managed to keep Jackson Street open, but Witcham was impassable from the sun-burites all the way to the center of town.

For everyone agreed, the worst was over. The Andover Stream had crested just below the bridge in the heavens and burst inches below the concrete sides of the Canal which channeled it tightly as it passed through downtown. Right now a gang of men—Zack Denbrough, George's old Bill's father, among others—were carrying the readings they had thrown up the dykes with such prickly kauri. Yester-

THE TERROR, which would not end for another twenty-eight years—if it ever did end—began, so far as I know or can tell, with a boat made from a sheet of newspaper floating down a gutter swollen with rain.

The boat bobbed, listed, righted itself again, dived bravely through treacherous whirlpools, and continued on its way down Witcham Street toward the traffic light which marked the intersection of Witcham and Jackson. The three vertical lenses on all sides of the traffic light were dark this afternoon in the fall of 1957, and the houses were all dark, too. There had been steady rain for a week now, and two days ago the winds had come as well. Most sections of Derry had lost their power then, and it was not back on yet.

A small boy in a yellow slicker and red galoshes ran cheerfully along beside the newspaper boat. The rain had not stopped, but it was finally slackening. It tapped on the yellow hood of the boy's slicker, sounding to his ears like rain on a shed roof . . . a comfortable, almost cozy sound. The boy in the yellow slicker was George Denbrough. He was six. His brother,

The advertisement features a large image of a modern building with a balcony overlooking a city skyline at sunset. The text includes:
Starview
LUXURY - RELAX - MODERN
Life is best lived where you live... And that's what the Starview is all about. Urban life, in the city with all the vibrancy and style you've earned. Is more ready to accommodate you in every way. That's why the Starview is the only place for you to build your life. Live your life, experience your life.
Call 1-800-997-8000 or visit www.starview.ca

The mobile website has a header with the letters "SV" and navigation links for HOME, TOUR, ABOUT, and CONTACT. The main content area shows a large image of the city skyline, followed by the headline "Let your life come alive at Starview". Below this are two smaller images: one of the interior of a building and another of a night market. A descriptive paragraph reads:
A unique destination unlike any other in North America, Starview is an enchanting village of brick-lined streets, inviting courtyards and extraordinary architecture, this vibrant area has become one of Toronto's hottest tourist attractions.
A vertical sidebar contains the following text:
An area of live theaters, galleries, fashion, design and jewelry boutiques, unique cafés, and award-winning restaurants. Though a part of the bustling downtown core, Starview is an oasis of character and personality, a step back in time, a quiet and charming neighborhood with a distinctly European flair. It is a magical place to live, work and experience everything that life has to offer.

The bottom section features a headline "Stay connected to everything" above images of people shopping at a market and dining at a restaurant.

Enjoy living in one of the city's hottest locations, surrounded by great shopping, dining and nightlife, and just minutes to the lake and downtown core. Easily accessible via major transit, Starview is just a
